

In the event of flooding, federal disaster assistance, if available, comes in the form of a loan that must be repaid with interest.

On top of that, if you are uninsured and receive federal disaster assistance, you may need to purchase flood insurance to remain eligible for future relief. Compare these key differences between disaster relief and flood insurance, then decide (with the help of your agent) which is the better alternative for you.

Disaster Assistance

- Most forms of federal disaster assistance require a presidential declaration.
- Federal disaster assistance declarations are issued in less than 50% of all flood incidents.
- Disaster assistance is usually provided as a Small Business Administration (SBA) loan, which must be repaid with interest.
- The typical duration of a disaster loan is 30 years.

Flood Insurance

- As long as a general condition of flooding exists, flood insurance claims are paid even if the President does not declare a disaster.
- Once a claim has been paid, there is no payback requirement. Benefits are paid out of insurance premiums, not from federal tax dollars.
- 25% of all NFIP claims involve damage that occurs outside of designated "Special Flood Hazard" areas.

NOTE: The NFIP defines a flood as a general or temporary condition during which at least two properties in an area (one of which is your property)—or two acres of normally dry land— are partially or completely covered by water.

Why you need flood insurance ...

no matter where you live or run a business.

Virtually, all of us are in a flood zone.

Even if you are not located near a lake or river, you still face flood risks.

Of course there are the obvious threats of flood—hurricanes, heavy rainstorms and melting snow—but you can also experience flooding from other not-so-obvious causes:

- ✓ damaged water mains
- ✓ broken levees and dams
- ✓ ruptured tanks and towers

Most property policies do not cover flood damage.

Contrary to what many people believe, very few property policies insure flood damage. In fact, most of them only cover damage that is caused by overflow or accidental discharge of water from within a structure.

Never say never.

Well over half of all declared natural disasters involve floods and 25% of all flood claims occur in areas not identified as high flood risk zones. Don't be fooled into thinking it couldn't happen to you.

Harleysville Insurance is one of the top ten insurers that, through an agreement with the Federal Insurance Administration, sell and service federal flood insurance policies. The National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP) was instituted by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) to reduce property owners' dependency on government disaster relief to cover property losses due to floods.

Debris removal

After a flood loss, coverage pays (up to the policy limit) for costs you incur to have debris on, in or from insured property removed as a result of flooding. For removal work performed by you or a member of your household, you may be eligible to be reimbursed at federal minimum wage.

Increased cost of compliance

After a flood strikes, your community may impose certain floodplain management ordinances and other flood-proofing measures to comply with FEMA (Federal Emergency Management Agency) guidelines, and to help combat future flood loss. Flood insurance pays up to $30,000 for the extra costs you incur to bring your building in compliance—even if it means elevating or relocating it—when eligibility requirements are met. (Coverage is subject to qualifying limitations, qualifications and maximum statutory limitations.)
